

Robert Miles: On Berkshire Hathaway, the Wisdom of Warren Buffett, and Achieving Your Dreams

Recently, Robert Miles and I sat down to talk shop: Shop, in this case, being what it means to be a shareholder in Berkshire Hathaway, Miles' journey as a Warren Buffett expert scholar, and the life lessons to be learned from the game "Bridge".

Miles is a Berkshire Hathaway shareholder and the author of three books, all of which explore Berkshire Hathaway and the life of Warren Buffett—one of the most well-known investors in the world.

As Robert and I (Marco LeRoc) talk, you'll learn:

- What it's like to take part in Miles's world-renowned course, The Genius of Warren Buffett
- Why Miles believes that character is a personal choice
- How Warren Buffett advises his shareholders to get the most out of their stocks
- Why Miles believes that internships and a wise choice in mentors can make or break the college experience.

Robert and I (Marco LeRoc) talk about the importance of internships in determining a career path, why voracious reading is a direct pathway to success, and why it's foolish to wait until you're rich to achieve your dreams.

And why is that?

In Miles' words: "You should do what you would do if you were already rich. Waiting to do something until you're rich...is like saving up sex for old age."

--

Video interview (15:05) <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=R1s6Ke3exUA>

Once you've had a chance to tune in, I'd love to hear about your personal mentors. Why do they inspire you, and what has that example allowed you to accomplish in your life?